- Flights
- Hotels ||+1→888→483→9719

- Vacation rentals
- Car rentals
- Cruises
- Vacation packages
- Activities and experiences

Depending on your Chase card, you may also redeem Ultimate Rewards® points toward travel purchases or combine points with cash.

Does Chase Travel Sell Refundable Airline Tickets?

Yes. Chase Travel provides access to refundable airline tickets whenever participating airlines offer refundable fare options.

When searching for flights, you'll often see different fare categories, such as:

- Refundable
- Non-refundable
- Flexible fares
- Basic Economy
- Main Cabin
- Premium Economy
- Business Class
- First Class

Whether a ticket is refundable depends on the airline's published fare rules—not simply the fact that it was booked through Chase Travel.

How Can You Tell If a Flight Is Refundable?

Before completing your reservation, review the fare details carefully.

A refundable ticket typically includes language such as:

- Fully Refundable
- Refundable Fare
- Free Cancellation
- Refund to Original Payment Method

You'll also find fare conditions that explain:

- Cancellation rules
- Change policies
- Refund eligibility
- Airline fees
- Travel credits (if applicable)

Always review these terms before purchasing your ticket.

How Do Refundable Airline Tickets Work?

Refundable tickets generally allow travelers to cancel their reservation before departure and receive a refund, subject to the airline's fare conditions.

Depending on the airline, refunds may be issued as:

- Original payment refund
- Credit card refund
- Ultimate Rewards® points (if points were used)
- Airline travel credit
- Flight voucher

Processing times vary depending on the airline and payment method.

Are All Chase Travel Flights Refundable?

No.

Many flights sold through Chase Travel are non-refundable, especially:

- Basic Economy fares
- Promotional fares
- Discounted airline sales
